Rowhead Wedding Flowers, owned by Gail, is based in Biggar and in Edinburgh. Gail would be more than delighted to meet with you to discuss your flowers at an address to suit you or indeed in the Edinburgh shop at West Preston Street (not far from the Royal Commonwealth Pool)

The language of flowers started in the harems of the Middle East, where secrecy between lovers was essential.

Each flower had a meaning and could be used to exchange secret messages.

The Victorians took this language to their hearts and produced several dictionaries of the language of flowers.

The Language of Flowers

ROSES

The most popular flower choice for the bride, but different coloured roses convey different meanings:

WHITE stands for innocence, purity, beauty and charm;

RED stands for passion and fiery love;

PALE PINK stands for grace and happiness;

DARK PINK is expressing thankfulness from the couple that they found each other;

IVY stands for fidelity in the marriage.

CALLA LILIES represent elegance, charm, beauty and grace, and are for a sophisticated touch.

TULIPS are also popular, particularly for a Spring wedding. They represent an undying love.

DAISIES stand for romance and innocence.
